MANATEE & SARASOTA COUNTIES

arasota Bay forms the coast of Manatee and Sarasota counties. This series of embayments start at the Anna Maria Sound and goes south to the Venice Inlets. Sarasota Bay has 50 square miles of open water and a 250 square mile watershed—the land, river and streams that drain into a body of water—forming the backbone of the social and economic vitality of the region.

The Bay supports 50 water-dependent industries. Tourism, the largest industry in Sarasota County and the second largest industry in Manatee County, depends strongly on the condition and quality of the Bay and the Gulf of Mexico.

Our area is a tropical pardise best known for its aquamarine waters and white sandy beaches. From the coastal shores to the scenic Manatee and Myakka Rivers you can find outstanding fishing, boating, canoe/ kayak trails, and wildlife viewing.

Native Americans Mineral springs in southern Sarasora County and burial, midden, and temple mounds located along the river banks and oay shore have provided evidence of human habitation back 12,000 years. Much like today, native Florida Indians depended on estuaries, lakes, and rivers for their livelihood. Over the centuries this area's water resources continued to attract inhabitants. Wher settlers first arrived in the 1840s, Florida was not yet a state. The territory was populated by scattered fishermen who came from Cuba and established fishing camps called ranchos on the coast. Seminole Indians, though restricted by the federal government to interior lands, mingled with the new arrivals. By the early 1850s one of the few important Seminole War Chiefs left in Florida was Billy Bowlegs. Billy Bowlegs would frequently visit settlers in the Manatee River area Visit the South Florida Museum (site 21), and the De Soto National Memorial (site 19) to learn more of the areas' Native Americans and early Spanish explorers.

Homesteaders

Florida homesteaders, also know as "Crackers, started populating the state in the 1800s. Living in Florida was hard then without air conditioning and bug
